Succeeding Russell

Ellender, at 80, Assumes Major Post in Senate

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 (AP).-Allen J. Ellender as tough and hard-working at 80 as when he took his Senate seat 34 years ago, assumes command of the powerful Senate Appropriations Committee with the death of Sen. Richard Russel, D. Ga.

The Louisiana Democrat also becomes senior member of the Senate: a body where seniority is equated with power and esteem, and as such assumes the honorary post of president pro tempore. This makes him third in line for the presidency behind the Vice-President and speaker of the House. Sen. Russell, who died yesterday at the age of 73, was both dean and president pro tem of the Senate. "The best tonic for aging."

Sen. Ellender said on his 80th birthday, "Is enthusiasm and always thinking of the future and tough discipline. I've gone hungry in order to get to the gym at the proper time."

To Seek 7th Term

Sen. Ellender already has announced that he intends to run for a seventh term, in 1972, with the still longer-range plan of surpassing the record of Sen. Carl Hayden, D., Ariz., who served 42 years and 9 months in the Senate. Sen. Ellender is not likely to be the power that Sen. Russell was in the Senate for the last two decades. But he will bring a unique style to the Appropriations Committee.

In a day when the growth of senatorial duties has forced many senators to rely heavily on burgeoning staffs, Scn. El-lender remains an old-fashion-ed legislator. He runs long hours of hearings himself and does his own on-the-scene in-vestigating around the world. Sen. Eilender has been a sharp critic of the Senate's lavish spending on its own committees and investigations.
"We have so many investigators, attorneys and experts now that they fi'll every nook and cranny of the old Senate Building, the New Senate Office Building and the new east front of the Capitol," he said.

Unlike Sen. Russell, who sup-ported major presidential decisions in the foreign and defense fields. Sen. Ellender has long favored curbs on defense spending and presents a distinctly mixed record on recent national security issues. He opposed Senate efforts to limit presidential power in Southeast Asia but favors a cutback in U. S. forces in Europe. He voted against the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile but supports the supersonle transport plane.

A native of Montegut in Louisiana's bayou country. Sen. Ellender was elected city attorney of Houma at age 22, then moved to the Louisiana House of Representatives, where he was majority leader and speaker in the late 1930s and early 1930s, the days of Huey

One of the fabled Kingfish's closest advisers. Sen. Ellender was elected to Long's Senate seat a year after his assassination in 1935.

Known as the "Little Buli" of the Senate in his younger days, Sen. Ellender keeps himself in trim with daily workouts in the Senate gymnasium, puts in ten to 12 hours daily in his office and sets himself a blistering pace while campaigning.

Filled in for Russell Chairman of the Agriculture Committee since 1951, except for two years when Republicans controlled the Senate, Sen. El-lender doubled as acting chairman of Appropriations during Sen. Russell's illness. Sen, Ellender is renowned as the best cook in Congress. He has frequent lunches in his Capitol bideaway room, where he has served Presidents and reporters with such dishes as shrimp gumbo, As chairman of the Agriculture Committee, Sen. Ellender has left his imprint on much farm legislation over the years. He was author of the original School Lunch Act. Last year, however, Congress enacted a new farm law over his somewhat strenuous opposition.

Dr. Binns said he thought the sheep stuffed themselves with the poisonous weed because it was the only nourishment they could find. All the dead sheep were ewes pregnant with lambs. Total loss, including wool loss, was estimated at $50,000.

U.S. to Require Super Brakes on Big-Load Trucks

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (UPI) Director Douglas A. Toms of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration announced that the government will soon require beavily loaded trucks to have brakes that can stop them as quickly as passenger cars can halt.

"We are moving as rapidly as possible to require trucks to have anti-skid type of brakes," said Mr. Toms in explaining that the tough new standards would be intended to avoid chain collisions of trucks and cars on superhighways.

The New Democratic Leaders

I learned a long time ago that as long 25 you don't know how to lose, you don't deserve to win." The remark, at once sporting and graceful, was made by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy who had just suffered a sizeble and unforeseen defeat for re-election as majority whip by Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia. The element of surprise was itself apposite-in a particularly harsh way -to the apparent meaning of the defeat, reinforcing reports that Senator Kennedy had in fact lost signal with those Democratic colleagues he was meant, as whip, to be in constant touch with and whose every move or potential move he was expected to divine. Along with Senator Kennedy's reported distraction from the job, personal grievance and ambition on the part of some of his colleagues may also have contributed to the result. What seems certain, however, is that his toppling from this post cannot—or anyway should not-be taken as evidence of some ideological swing within the majority party in Congress.

There are two old truths to be restated here, the first concerning cause and the second effect, in relation to leadership elections on the Hill, First, internal politics based on a whole set of arrangements and relationships all but barren of ideology tend to determine the outcome of these elections. And, second, no matter how firmly committed to or identified with a political ideology a successful candidate may be, he tends-if he is to be a successful leader—to become less firmly committed and identified as time goes by. Everett Dirksen and Hubert Humphrey provide examples of how the process works. William F. Knowland's term as Republican leader provided the example of how it can fail to work. We doubt if Seriator Byrd, no ideological soulmate of ours has neglected to notice all this. Indeed, his election by men many of whom must have been at odds with him on the issnes demonstrates that he is onto the ill-kept secret,

These observations were prompted not just by Senator Kennedy's defeat, but also by the outcome of the majority leader election in the House. In one way, the election of Representative Boggs was testimony to the durability of the strategic disorganization of liberals in Congress even of such organized men as Representatives O'Hara and Udall. Once again, that is, there was not a single candidate or a single strategy or-presumably-a single purpose. There are other reasons not to put too fine an ideological point on the outcome of that contest, to see it in right-left, mood-swinging terms. One is that in these terms, Hale Boggs is not nearly so distant from Morris Udall or James O'Hara as is, say, Robert C. Byrd from Edward M. Kennedy; and reportedly he made his election pitch as a "National Democrat" in Congress.

The phrase also applies-and much more importantly so-to Carl Alhert, who succeeds this week as speaker of the House. And if we were to guess which of these various leadership changes will provide a difference, both apparent and real, in Congress, we would say that it will be the elevation of Mr. Albert to replace John McCormack. Here it is less a matter of ideology again than of temperament: We expect that the new speaker, for better or for worse, will have a far keener sense of national party purpose vis-a-vis the Nixon administration than Speaker McCormack had and also a more combative way of expressing it. So you could say of the week's events that none was more polgnant and dramatic than that which befell Senator Kennedy, and that so far as long-range succession is concerned, none was more critical than the second-step success of Mr. Boggs-moving np from whip to speaker. But it is our view, or at least our speculation, that the least drama-fraught and disputed of them all, the elevation of Carl Albert, will make the most prononnced and immediate difference on Capitol Hill.

Of Fish, Oil and Oceans

THE WASHINGTON POST.

The latest tiff between the United States and Ecuador over the seizing of American tuna boats underscores again the imperative need for an international regime to govern the orderly development of oceanic resources for all countries. There is no practical alternative to international authority, preferably exercised under the United Nations. At stake among other considerations is the ancient and precious doctrine of freedom of the

Of course it is far-fetched for Ecnador and other Latin American countries to claim territorial waters—and therefore exclusive fishing jurisdiction—out to 200 miles. etec invited this citration -almost insured it—when President Truman in 1945 claimed the natural resources in the seabed of the "continental shelf" off Amerlcan coasts for exclusive United States "jurisdiction and control."

Despite assurances to the contrary, this doctrine chipped away at the freedom-ofthe-seas principle and diluted the traditional American stand for a three-mile limit to territorial waters. It met little opposition, however, and was codified in a Geneva convention of 1958. Mr. Truman acted primarily at the behest of the oil industry. which continues to interpret the convention liberally and to lobby for an even covered by the Geneva convention simply made their claims on the ocean itself and the fish it contained. Ecuador, Peru and Chile extended territorial waters to 200 miles. Fourteen Latin American countries last year proclaimed their right to as much of the sea and seabed as might be necessary to protect their offshore wealth.

The State Department is bound by illconceived laws to cut off arms sales and credits and possibly economic aid to Ecuador. in retaliation for the tuna boat seizures. This will only arouse much of Latin America against the United States, seen as a bully unwilling to grant poor countries offshore Actually, Washington worked hard last year for a resolution adopted overwhelmingly by the United Nations General Assembly that declares oceanic resources "the common heritage of mankind," to be governed by an international regime that will be established by a UN conference in 1973. But 1973 is a long way oif, as the unfortunate quarrel with Ecnador reminds us.

About all the United States can do in the interim is to exercise as much patience and restraint in incidents such as that of the tuna boats as the laws allow. That low-key stance may help deter additional attempts to extend sovereignty over oceanic resources that 103 nations agreed last month could be developed rationally and safely only under internetional authority.

Nixon on the Spot

"If Nixon does not manage to "keen" Cambodia, it is a Democratic President who will make the peace in Indochina, on Hanoi's terms. The evolution of the situation in Cambodia in the three coming months is the key to the continuation of American disengagement from Vietnam.

If the Lon Nol regime manages to withstand Communist pressure until the end of the dry season, until May, if the enemy does not manage in the meantime to fully restore its communication lines with the delta area. if he does not manage to reconstitute important sanctuaries in northeastern Cambodia, President Nixon will have no difficulty in repatriating all the American combat units by next December, on the eve of the 1972 election year.

If not the whole Indochinese strategy would have to be reconsidered. Nixon would again be confronted with the choice in the face of which his predecessor Lyndon John-

Wooing Poland's Workers

The economy remains the ultimate test by which the new leadership will survive or fall. So far, it has scarcely had time to do anything but make a few conciliatory gestures, like raising the incomes of poorer families. Its long-term plans are not yet clear. Whatever they are, they will take a long time to produce results that are visible to the ordinary workers, and unless it can persuade the workers that results are on the way it may not even achieve enough cooperation to produce them. The first task is therefore to win the country's confidence. This Mr. Glerek shows signs of doing, but he must know that time is fairly short. The workers have toppled one regime and they could topple another. The knowledge should help to concentrate the party's mind on essentials.

The Voices of the South

By James Reston

ST. PETERSBURG, Fig. - The Old South is mourning the death of Sen Richard Russell of Georgia, but there is a new South, now partly liberated from history, and the tragedy of Dick Russell is that he was sick and old when the political transformation of the South took place. He is a symbol of the accident of time and life in American politics. He had that gift, so rare lar results, but they have done so and important now, of making people believe in his integrity as a person, even when they disagreed with his policies. Nobody could have disagreed with his support of the military more than Sen. J. W. Fulbright of Arkansas, but Fulbright believed in Russell, and thought he might very well have gone to the very pinnacle of American politics in the White House if he had been born at another time and in another place.

Russell never really got over the ght that he was rejected as a presidential nominee because be was a Southerner. He made one run at the presidency, but was passed over, not because he did not measure up to his competitors. but simply because he was from the South. And he died a sad, lonely and embittered man because of this rejection.

It is tronic and tragic to hear of his death here in the South, and to wonder what would have happened to him, with his gift Africa. with men, and his remarkable knowledge of the intricate human American political process, if be had heen a senator of the new South which is clearly now emerg-

New Generation

Something remarkable and significant is happening in this part of the country. The men who have heen appealing to regional and racial prejudice are declining. It is a little like what has been happening in the new nations of Asia and Africa. The theatrical characters, appealing to the glories and prejudices of the past—Nasser, Nkrumah, Sukarno, etc. abroad; and Claude Kirk of Florida and Lester Maddox of Georgia-are being replaced by a new generation of politicians who are taking a wider view of local, national and world politics.

The new governor of Florida, Reuben Askew, took office the other day, rejecting the racial politics of his predecessor, and calling for "improved economic opportunities and equal rights for all our people, rural as well as urban, black as well as white."

The new governor of Dick Russett's state of Georgia, a peanut former, former state senator, and nuclear submarine officer named Jimmy Carter, took office last week proclaiming that "the time for racial discrimination is over." Similarly, the new governor of South Carolina, John C. West, announced in his inaugural address that "the politics of race and divisiveness . have been soundly repudiated."

So something is happening down here. Even George Wallace of Alabame, who was shouting eight years ego, "segregation now, segregation tomorrow, segregation for-ever, took office the other day with a less provocative theme.

A lot of good men have been cut down in the struggle—not only Russell of Georgia and Mayor Ivan Allen of Atlanta, and Terry Sanford of North Carolina-but out of their battles we are beginning to create a new national politics in which good men, from whatever region, and even from the smaller states, may in the future have an equal chance to get to the White

A 2d Chappaquiddick For Sen. Kennedy?

WASHINGTON.—The presidential prospects of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts suffered a second Chappaquiddick Thursday, in the judgment of many of his fellow Democrats. Whereas the first setback was an accident, Thursday's defeat at the hands of Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia in the contest for the majority whip's job was a deliberately administered spank-ing by his own Democratic Senate

Ail of the active and prospective 1972 hopefuls except Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington told newsmen they had voted for Sen. Kennedy. Sen. Jackson, who had made a seconding speech for Sen. Kennedy in his successful race against Russell B. Long of Loui-siana two years ago, declined to tell how he had marked his secret ballot in this year's caucus. The Loneliness of Mr. Heath

By Anthony Lewis

LONDON.-Just before the Commonwealth Prime Ministers Conference in Singapore, a British politician notably free of illusions expressed the hope that Prime Minister Heath would agree there to a six-month delay in his plan to sett maritime arms to South

But wouldn't that prolong uncertainty and tension over the Issue? he was asked. Wouldn't it mean six more months of political sniping at home and backbiting in Britain's Commonwealth relations? Yes, he replied, it would be terrible worse than anything except going ahead with the arms sales at

In the event, such a delay seems to be the main outcome of the Singapore meeting. An eight-nation study group appointed to consider the security of Britain's trade routes in the Indian Ocean and South Atlantic will probably take at least six months to report.

Mr. Heath could conceivably go ahead despite the study and tell the House of Commons that Britain will start shipping arms to South Africa: he firmly reserved his freedom of action, But even in his most determined mood he is likely to recognize that such action now, after agreeing however skeptically to the study, would look like deliberate provocation to the Commonwealth opponents of arms

The question is how the six months will be used-and that is a question for the United States as wett as Britain. Washington has tried to stay out of the South African arms uprour, but it unavoidably affects all Western policy toward Africa. In particular, it tests the validity of what could be called the Dean Acheson realpolitik.

Acheson dismisses the black African countries as powerless, politically unreliable and not worth our concern. Our real friends, he says, strong and committed to the West, are the South Africans; we should not moralize -lowest word in the Acheson laxicon-over such little local difficulties as a system of seridom more sweeping and relentless than slavery in imperial Rome.

Heath must have learned as much at Singapore. Nigeria, hardly doctrinaire or moralist, made clear that she would retaliste. A country as Western in outlook as Kenya was worried

There is the political risk that resentment at Britain-however illogical Heath might consider it-will push the East African countries toward closer association with China and the Soviet Union. The United States government can hardly ignore that possibility. We are long past the age of worrying about every political change in Africa, rauch less intervening. But we are still surely concerned enough to caution our closest ally if a policy of arms sales professedly designed to counter Soviet naval intrus in into the Indian Ocean in fact increases Communist influence along the African shore of that Judging by the pugilistic reports from Singapore in most British newspapers, Heath saw himself there as a brave battler for Britain. His courage is unarguable, but he may later reflect on the fact of his loneliness.

Virtually no other Commonwealth prime minister saw much in his strategic argument that selling some frigates to South Africa would counter the Soviet Navy in tho Indian Ocean-even less outbal-

His top assistant, David Burke, said later that "we do not helieve" anyone other than Jackson among the presidential prospects opposed Kennedy. Heath is also becoming increasingly isolated in his own cabinet on the South African arms issue. His defense minister, Lord Carrington, has been skeptical from the start about the policy. Now, according to highly informed ources, doubts are being felt by

The Conservative cabinet is not going to outvote its prime minister on this issue; the members have too much at stake in the still new government to press him too far. But their doubts may have an effect. So may the fact that Heath already faces two tremendous political battles this year, on the Common Market and the reform of labor relations. He may chance now-just a chance-of a compromise. For example, Britain could limit the arms sold to replacements or some narrow categories. It will not be easy to find a formula that satisfies Heath's sense of commitment on the issue and the Africans' sensitivities, but at least Singapore has left the way scarcely know Byrd, the vote will be viewed as a clear repudiation of Kennedy's leadership by his colleagues. And while the expressed reasons for unhappiness with his performance in the Senate centered on his absences and insttention to detail, the public likely will take it as a criticism of his personality, his record and perhaps even a reflection of senatorial disapproval of his actions at Chap-paquiddick. Among the politicians, one senator remarked, "Kennedy is hurt just because he got licked." Kennedy himself told reporter;

"You can add up the wins and losses. I think I'm still ahead. But the defeat removes the aura of invincibility that was part of Kennedy political myth, and the indgment expressed by several colleagues that Byrd's challenge caught Kennedy napping will not enhance his reputation among pro-fessional politicians in and out of Kennedy's defeat was as welcome as it was surprising to the White House. Two members of the President's congressional lighson staff who happened by as the Democratic caucus was breaking up joined the general expressions of amazement at Kennedy's upset

"Byrd should be more cooperative," one of them sald, perhans reflecting on Byrd's past support of controversial Nixon appointees and foreign policies. "That's one less presidential ambition we have to deal with," the other remarked. Among the observations on the possible effect of Kennedy's defeat these were most frequent:

• It may cause "establishment" Democrats, like Chicago's Mayor Richard J. Daley, who waited for a Kennedy candidacy in 1963 and might have been inclined to wait again in 1973, to throw their sup-port earlier behind Muskie, the present front-runner.

• It may aid McGovern, the only declared candidate, to shake off the suspicion that he is only a stalking-horse for Kennedy and to pick up additional liberal sup-

• It may bring more backing to Bayh, Hughes or some other darkhorse from Democrats who were previously in the Kennedy camp.

 It may bring Humphrey quickly to the forefront as the leader of the Senate liberals and their main hope to defeat Byrd when Mike Mansfield steps down as majority leader. Humphrey, who served as whip before he became Vice-President, could emerge not only as a Senate leader but as a presidential bopeful himself.

Several Democrats also comment ed that with the elevation of Byrd, the Democratic congressional leadership now has a definite South-ern-Border state accent that may cause some "image" problems for the opposition party.

With Carl Albert of Oklahoms replacing John McCormack of Massachusetts as speaker of the House, Byrd of West Virginia beat ing Kennedy as Senate whip, and Hale Boggs of Louislana winning the five-way fight for House major-ity leader, the Fastern, industrial urban areas that provide most of the votes for Democratic presidential candidates are not represented in the party's congressional

ART MARKET: Pictures That Cast Spells

By Souren Melikian

ONDON.—The fad for buying works of historical interest is a sudden and unexpected phenomenon, which has resulted in a new category of sales devoted to paintings, prints and objects illustrating life in the United States. Canada, the West Indies, South Africa, Australia and New Zealaud. This is the kind of auction to be held at Sotheby's on Thursday.

The sale would have been unthinkable in the early '60s when the art market was governed by rules of oppreciation which were etrictly related to aesthetic criteria. Few acutioneers would have considered illustrating a sales catalog with such a mediocre picture as "New Orleans, a Quay Scens" (5 by 7 1/2 inches, Lot 62 in Sotheby's sale). The work, signed in brushpoint by William Aiken Walker, isn't art; it is a perfect reproduction of a place as it was 100 or 150 years ago and it is these documentary qualities that are valued in this new category.

A phrase nevec heard in the salesroom before 1965 or 1966 is used to refer to these pictures. The uninitiated might call them "landscapes," but they are known in the trade as "topographical painting," words which emphasize their essential quality.

It would be misleading to suggest that these works never have any artistry. Every now and then, there are some fine landscapes. Sothebr's sale, for example, includes a seascape by Domi-nique Serres, painted in 1764, which has all the qualities found in British seascapes of the mid-18th century. However, the title given to the picture by Sothehy's experts makes it quite clear that the main interest of the picture lies else-where, In the catalog it appears as: "A Per-spective View of His Majesty's Land Porces Going in Plat Boats to Take Possession of the North Gate of the City and Punto Castle on the 14th of August 1762, Also Two Sloops of War Assisting to Open the Booms."

While the detailed descriptions can make tedious reading and sound pedantic, one can see the power of attraction of such pictures. They appeal to the imagination and evoke romantic associations of days gone by. There is fascination in a view of New York (Lot 64 in Thursday's sale, with eteamers in the foreground and the nco-classical domes and church spires which loomed in the distance about 1840 to 1850 as one arrived from the sea. The scene has been lightly rendered in ink and wash and heightened with white by Louis Lebreton, a French artist, Apart' from landscapes, portraits of South African or American interest are the other main categories of this kind of painting. There are

Lot 16 in Sotheby's sale is a watercolor by an artist called Frederick Timpson Fons. who drew a portrait of Mapasa on Sept. 28, 1844. Mapasa's people, eo the story goes, "were con-stantly committing robberies" and in 1838 an expedition sent against him exacted compensation. In the Kaffir war of 1846, he joined the Xosas against the colony. He was besten again by the British force which attacked his krasl. Although he escaped he lost his cattle and land. Eventually, be was allowed to reside on his land but when war broke cut again-the eighth Kaffir war in 1250-Managa once more turned his warclors against the colony and was killed in battle. In the drawing, Mapasa has a conventional, bland face, one that hardly reflects the passion of a warrior. Perhaps the painter simply saw him started the fashion with his designs for new year art calendars, a few of which can be seen here. His theme, on the whole, is the graceful life, and his portrayal of it is always gently understated. One print, for instance, shows an attentive young woman on a bench in front of some vegetation, and despite its title "The Nightingale in the Bamboo Trees," no nightingale is to be seen.

But the high esthetic qualities of these prints-not only Harunobuls but also these of Shunsho, Kiyonaga Shunman, Utamaro and Sharaku—also mark their limitations.

From Japan: Luminous Dead End

The treatment of human features is, on the whole, conventional to the point of bore-dom. Every single woman portrayed has the same minute, petal-shaped lips and indeed the same high expression. Mutatis mutandis, as much could be said of the Playboy foldout and to a certain extent-for the same reasons. These highly in-telligent artists were in fact establishing an esthetic—almost an erotle—convention. But their own position is that of an en-tirely detached observer. Their prime concern is not with the content but with a certain formal perfection which is the essence of craft but not of art.

One may probably distinguish the individual style of each artist by an attentive study of their production, but their personality does not emerge in their works because they are not concerned with manifesting it.

Ideal of Grace

They are the servants of an ideal of grace which, in feudal Japan, no doubt sprang from the same need for an aristocratic criterion of acceptability-respectable and undefinablethat arese in Europe after the Remaissance. The greatest in-fluence of this criterion, in both parts of the world, must have been on the rising classes that had most to gain from an identification with this ideal. Not that the models for these prints were themselves aristo-cratic (actors, though adulated, were beyond the pale) but the

Taken all together these prints are what one might call "classy," meaning impeccable and frigid, a quality one can still find in contemporary Japanese production.

There is, in fact, generally speaking, a sort of intellectual sensuality in much of Janenese art which, I would guess, derives from the natura of the social and psychological pres-sures the Japanese have had to live with during the cen-turies. What it lacks is a spontaneous sensuality such as appears in a freely developing personality. . As a "esult the Japanese artist is more concerned with attitudes than with expression, and the prints ex-hibited here testify to this talent for codifying attitudes through external observation.

But in an age like our own, with its dominant trend toward departonalization, this strongly impersonal art appears more like a luminous dead end than a peak of human creation.

Photography's Rightful Place

By Max Wykes-Joyce

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Photography in England has long been considered the playground of the amateur, the Cinderella of the arts, something to be used to illustrate vulgar news sheets or as an adjunct to landscape painting or portraiture.

The elevation of photography to its rightful place among the fine arts began last year in London with the exhibition of Adrian Plowers's prints at the Angela Flowers gallery and continues with two sets of prints at the Maltzahn Gallery. 3 Cork St., and the opening of The Photographer's Gallery, 8 Great Newport St. W C 2.

Each set at the Maltzehn Gallery consists of ten photographs collected and arranged by Photo-Graphic Editions. The first is of ten classics of Victorian photography from the Gernshelm Collection at the University of Texas and includes Pox-Talbot's pioneer "The Chess Players," portraits of the as-

A Perverse Production Of 'Duchess of Malfi'

By John Walker

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The stage has the appearance of a derelict house, with bare brick walls and two rows of battered doors. The actors are dressed alike, in uniforms of gold-colored overalls. They sit motionless on a row of kitchen chairs. When they do move. the lesser members of the cast carry the others forward, as if they were dummies, to deliver

The Royal Court has always had a perverse way with cles-sics, and never more so than in its current austere and reticent version of John Webster's oloody, death-obsessed Jacobean tragedy of revenge, "The Duchess of Maifi."

Peter Gill, the director, seems to have taken as his starting point Shaw's sneer that Webster was a "Tussaud Lan-reate" by making his actors inhabitants of a literal chamber of horrors. There is a moment, late in the play, when the duchess is confronted by a waxwork replica of her mutilated husband and her dead children, and thinks it real. Throughout, the audience suffers similar uncertainties, faced with actors frozen into immobility or being tipped from their chairs as a cue to speech. It is rather like watching a performance by Laputans, that race, discovered by Gulliver on his travels, whose minds were so taken up with intense speculations that they could not speak or hear without being roused by some external force. There is no denying that this approach forces an unusually close attention to Webster's verse, which stands up well under the scrubing. "The Duchess of Malfi" was first performed sometime before 1614, but Webster's extraordinary vision of life as a mixture of sickness and torture, of sex as an irresistible force seems very modern. There never has been anyone to touch him for invective, or his powerful, physical

What is missing from the Court's understated approach is Webster's clan. The play of the level of plot, is absurd; the Duchers of Malfi's two brothers, a cardinal and a duke are determined that their widowed sister shall not many again. They employ a spy, an ex-galley slave called Bosols. who discovers her secret marriage to a commoner, her steward. The brothers decide w murder er and her husband Their revenge seems unduly tardy for, by the time they so into action, the ducbess has three children, all of them, judging by this production, in their teens. By the cnd of the play, there are nine people dead, by stabbing, poisoning, and etrangling. Here, the play fits the Court's preoccupations, as an early aswarfare. The stress is put on the duchess's husband being killed for marrying above his rank while Bosola is seen as no more than a lackey of the ruling classes, who finally turns of them.

Apart from Judy Partit's serene duchess and Desirold Gill's Antonio they play best love scene charmingly—the acting is not up to the discipline of Mr. Gill's direction. Victor Henry, surprisingly, gives an eccentrio performance as Bosois; accenting uninmertant words and swallowing key ones so that he reduces the verse to rubble. The final scene, with its multiple deaths, brought damaging giggles from the audience.

It made me with ferently for a more flamboyent approach that could take the occasions! absurdities in its strike. There is a moderit appetite, ignored by the theater, for full-blooded horror mixed with laughter to dissolve the tension. If we are to have a contemporary approach to the Duchess of Maill," let it be directed by Roger Compan. with Vincent Price and Christopher Lee as idea, said Clive Barnes in The Times review. The critic praised Richard Green as Macduif, but said David H. Leary's performance in the title role "lacked the dimension of tragedy."

"A Doll's House," Christopher Hampton's new adaptation of Ibsen's play, produced by Hillard Elkins at the Playhouse Theater, has the freshness of a new play about it," Clive Barnes praised in The Times. "At times he (Hampton) is guilty of the stray anachronism . . . but this is a small matter. The play is alive." Claire Bloom gives "a thrilling performance" as Nora, the

FTC Hits Rockwell

The U. S. Federal Trade Commission has published a proposed complaint against North American Rockwell charging the company with monopolizing the market for textile indus-trial equipment. It asked the company to sell its recently-acquired Wyomissing textile machine works and refrain from acquiring any such works for ten years. Rockwell can either accept the proposed order or fight it. The FTC said Rockwell now has over two-thirds of the U. S. textile machinery market and about 80 percent of the nation's production of automatic looms. North American Rockwell had no comment on the action pending a re-view of the complaint.

> How to gain the advantages of investment management for a $5,000 to $50,000 portfolio

If the money you have today is to grow in the future toward more income, or for education, travel, leisure, retirement, it must be kept working full time to achieve your goals. Yet you may find that you are actually losing ground due to inflation, taxes or lack of time for investment decisions. To help solve this problem, clients in 55 countries have turned to The Danforth Associates Investment Management Plan. It has, we believe, proved especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios of from $5,000 to $50,000-on behalf of people who recognize and can share the risks and rewards of common stock investments. The cost is modest, as low as $100 per year. For a complimentary copy of a 42-page report describing this tested plan, its complete 10-year "performance record," and how it may help you now, simply write Dept. N-76.

THE PARAGON

By John Knowles. Random House. 210 pp. $5.25.

Reviewed by Richard R. Lingeman

JOHN Knowles's first novel, "A Separate Peace," was a book that I admired a good deal, but now, crunching those dregs of aftermath that every book leaves, I can't say that it was a book I liked very much. "The Paragon" is a more ille-able book, yet I cannot say that I admire it.

Before the reader rightfully. scales the wall at these semi-intelligible critical noises, let me try to explain. Ideally one both admires and likes certain books: with me the liking comes first, while the admiration is more a matter of reconstructed ex-perience after the fact—an appreciation of the artistic accomplishments of the author. Yet liking—or rather call it loving—is accorded to few. books and, alas for the cause of cultural uplift, one some-times likes books whose depth and sensibility one has no cause to admire. Books I have liked include "The Wizard of Oz" as well as "War and Peace" and "Swann's Way." Books I admired but did not like, would toclude "Doctor Faustus" and "The Castle."

"The Paragon" is John Knowles in a comic mood. We are set down in a Yale during the early 50s—fairly familiar haunts for a novelist (and for me since was there). Who writes about Harvard these days? Not since John Marquand have we had a real Harvard novelist. Yale has about it more nervous magic—like the Princeton of F. Scott Pitzgerald's day. Certainly it has inspired a number of novels over the years. I hasten to add that the profligacy of Yale graduates does not necessarily guarantee a high standard of art.

Indeed John Knowles—per-haps aided by the detachment of distance—is one of the first to turn Yale over coldly in his hands like a fragment of a meteor. There is much good humor here and most especially in his ironic description of the Yale College's fortress-like ap-pearance, complete with mosts. What did these Harknesses and Pearsons and Sterlings have in mind when they built those in-credible Gothic fortresses (assuming that the endowers had a say in the style of the build-ings they endowed)? A combination of medievalism symbolizing learning perhaps and, as Knowles has it, ramparts against the

His hero, Louis Colfax, Is one of those brainy, wacky missits that occur in the fiction of Mark Harris. The novel tells us of his sophomore—read wise fool—year at Yale, Louis is a fool in the best sense; as he tells us, "People who are afraid to make fools of themselves never make anything of themselves."

His family represents old, faded New England-wealth: "The Colfaxes had anticipated their decline by an inner family fatigue through two generations of squandering medes and beirivestment aunts and impro ident cousins." Madness, di somenia and totalifariania flap through the current generation like a luffing job. John Knowles is a skille writer with a sure sense of th novel. He has written what ! in effect the beginnings of fine academic satire with Yal as the locale (watch the her on a football weekend: "Like a big student partying at American universities, the spiri along Fraternity Row that night was a beer-cellar German. male backs and female behind were slapped, stairs were faller down, glasses were hurdled through windows, a michigan mingling, purposely histors engulfed everyone.") But when all is said and done the satire has waned and we are left with a minor bit of work. Rather than sustain : complete satiric vision, Mr Khowles has pandered too much to his hero, following him to lovingly down the garden paths of his eccentricities. He has given us the fantasy of the mochetypical college supermin The alienated superior sort-in spite of himself, I should hastiy add, for Lou Colfax is the epitome of the unsure, authoritarian youth, of the '50s. Before a man can be enshrined, he must play ten years in the major leagues, be retired for five, and gather 75 percent of votes cast by the enshriners, ten-year members of the BBWA. This year, with 360 ballots cast, the magic number was 270. !. There is nothing secret or mysterious about being tapped for baseball immortality, no ceremony at midnight on the outfield grass of a deserted stadium, no great rustling of ghostly flannels as the Babe whispers, "Relax, kid, once the plaque hardens you

For All Time

Had one of the candidates been elected a man for all time yesterday, then the ballot-counter, a brisk and cheerful baseball writer named Jack Lang, would have made two telephone calls: First, to Paul S. Karr, who as executor of the Clark family's Singer Sewing Machine fortune is president of their beneficence, the National Bareball Hall of Fame and Museum, then to the former ballplayer who has been waiting by the telephone all his life for a call from Forever. · Fifteen years after his retirement, a player is no longer eligible for the regular enshrimement process, and his name is turned over to a special committee on veterans. This committee was originally formed to enshring players who were active before the Hall of Fame was established. Now, it acts as a second net for immortals who may have slipped through the first time. Very few ballplayers, Joe Dimmaggio included, make the Hall of Fame the first year they are eligible. Stan Musial, Ted Williams, Jackie Robinson and Bob Feller were exceptions. After awhile, it recomes more difficult. In the years shead, when Sandy Koufax, Warren Spahn and Mickey Mantle become eligible, immortality for others will come more dear. Very few ballplayers, Joe DiMaggio included, make the Hall of Fame, and they include such obvious choices as Ruth and Cobb and not such obvious choices-Stanley Coveleski and Earle Combs and Monte Ward, an early players' union leader who compiled most of his 283 batting average before Casey Stengel was born.

Most ballplayers are not cynical about the Hall of Fame. There is something very reassuring about one's face cast in bronze and nailed onto a wall in a nice little museum in a very pretty rural town. Vacationing families trail through the displays secure that what is fixed here is painless and easily explained: Immortality is a tricky business but one can be sure that Denny McClain's gun

Johnny Vandermee got 98 votes this year, he may never make it in his lifetime, if at all, and, on record, he was not a very special pitcher. And yet his two no-hitters in a row should qualify him instantly for official recognition of his "immortality."

Bobby Thomson was no superstar, and yet his magic blow, the ninth-inning home-run that won for the New York Giants the 1851 pennant is a fat chapter in the oral history of the game. Roger Maris was a good, solid bellplayer, no more, and yet his 61 home runs and their impact on fans eclipse such Cooperstown busts as Rabbit Maranville and Gabby Hartnett. When Maris's time comes due, in another three years, he will probably not be named an immortal, which is no shame. It happens.

'I Was Scared All the Time,' Gurney Says of Racing Days

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 (UPI). Dan Gurney, who has stopped driving racing cars for a living, now admits, "I was scared all the time."

"It's not the type of fear that locks a man's mind or paralyzes him," Gurney said, "but it's still there. It makes him aware of the dangers, and can help him be prepared for them. I think most drivers have fear, but some of them say they don't. It's a relief not to drive any-

However, the 1971 racing season is just starting, and Gurney said that he already misses some of the things he gave up only a few months ago. "It's hard to answer what I miss most," he said. "It was a feeling of camuraderic that exists among the men on the team. It was a closeness that develops, especially in another country. I imagine anybody has second thoughts when it comes to retiring and I certainly have had twinges of regret." But when he was alone in the cockpit, Gurney found little camaraderie.

On the track, he explained, was "a hostile environ-nt. I don't mean the drivers, for they have certain ethical boundaries and they observe them. I mean the cars themselves. They're hot and rough. I lost 12 pounds in one race. In another, I saw guys come in after an hour with their hands bleeding.

"The very idea of going that fast staggers your mind. It's difficult to maintain precise vision with the wind buffeting your helmet and coggles. What you're really doing is controlling your fury. Every good driver has a mean streak, everybody who's truly competitive has a meen edge on him."

The camaraderie Gurney spoke about often disappeared too, away from the small cluster of teammates on the grandprix circuit. Only a few Americans have competed in the grand-prix series, and they were never warmly greeted by for-eign drivers and fans. Gurney was even less warmly received because he was a threat, leading every race one season and winning the Grand Prix of Belgium in 1967 in his own All-American Racers' Eagle.

Encountered Hostility

But Gurney said, "I still get much of my mail from those countries where I encountered the most hostility." He also adds he met his second wife, Evi, on the circuit in West Germany.

Mrs. Gurney also was the most important reason that her husband became a retired raco driver at the age of 39.

During a recent visit to New York, Gurney looked for sponsors for the racing organization over which he presides. He also announced plans for a new race, the Questor Grand Prix at Ontario, Calif., on March 28, The grand prix, which will pit the best American drivers and Formula A cars against the top grand-prix drivers and cars from the rest of the world, will be the richest road race in history.

"Road racing was always my first love," Gurney said, "and a race like this can make a man have second thoughts about retiring."

Paris Retiring Last Buses With Open Platforms

than to shoot them."

PARIS, Jan. 22 (Reuters).-The last of the Paris buses with open-air passenger platforms are running for the last time today after 35 years of service.

The Paris Public Transport Company is withdrawing the buses, which date from 1936, from the sole central Paris route they still run because they are considered dangerous.

The buses have a rear passeuger platform which is open at the sides. The transport company says that the platform could be dangerous to passengers in a collision as could the wooden bodies of the buses.

The 40 remaining buses will be replaced by modern ones. Pifteen of the veterans will be kept for ceremonial occasions and the rest sold for around 4,500 francs ($810) each.

"But I was in the service, and I don't know snyone who wore a belt of cartridges who didn't eventually want to shoot them." "These are dummy bullets," she said, "and all the powder's been taken out of the casings."

"But what's to prevent another store from selling powder, to go with the belts?" "Nothing," she said, rather irritated, "But even if a store sold powder for the bullets, you would still need a machine gun 'What would prevent a handbag manufacturer from making a bag that could turn into a machine gun?" "It's ridiculous," she replied.

'If a handbag turned into a machine gun, all the contents in the bag would fall out." "I never thought of that. What are you featuring in flame-throwers this year? She was determined to sell me a cartridge belt. "Why don't you try one on and see how pice it feels?" She threw the cartridge belt over my shoulder. "There," she said. "If you were wearing black silk pajamas, you'd look beautl-

"Let me ask you something," I said. "Why do you think women have gone ape over cartridge belts?"

"Do you know what it's like to be a woman?" she asked bit-"I didn't mean..."

"Do you think it's fun to be treated as a second-class citizen, to have to cook and sew and scrub and give birth to children?

"No, I guess it isn't, but, ..."

"We're people too," she said angrily, "And we're getting sick and tired of being sex objects."
"Please, lady," I begged.

"We've had it up to here hying in a masculine society with a masculine power structure grinding us into robots. And even when we want to wear something as simple as a belt of bullets, men laugh and make channel in April, will be a one and three-quarter hour study of the hopes and ideas of Laurent Piccoli, an aerospace tech-

would like to show how a 21-year-old who is just starting his career looks at things, what his criteria are.

"I want him to show us the world of his dreams, let him question the people he wants, let him see what he wants to see and have him tell us about it in his words, not mine."

She found her boy quite quickly. "I knew I wanted someone from south of the Loire because they are more talkative, and I didn't want someone who worked in a small factory because rival foctories would accuse us of giving free publicity."

The factory where Laurent works employs 8,500 people, Mrs. Hunebelle spotted him while walking through the workrooms. Having rejected boys whose ideal countries were too far (Tahiti) or two dreary (sheep stations in Australia), Mrs. Hunebelle liked Laurent's choices of the United States, Japan and Cuba. She also liked his answers to her questions.

"My first question was what is your ambition. I'd already asked that 100 times and the answer was usually more money. Laurent said, My ambition is to evolve. That seemed a good answer.

"I asked him to describe the society of his dreams. He said it was a society in which there were no great divisions between rich and poor, where people are not haunted by material problems as they are in France and so car spend time improving themselves, and where they will have between to average them. they will have leisure to express themselves as they evolve."

Furthermore, Laurent is extremely good-looking and has blue eyes (the program is in color). He earns 1,300 francs ($236) a month and did his technical studies on scholarships: His father, an Italian-born agricultural worker, earns 800 francs ($144) a month. Laurent rooms with a friend, rides, skis, has traveled in Europe and is unmarried.

Working Life

"He's been working for seven months," Mrs. Hunebelle says. "The change from school to working life is like a knock on the head for these boys, suddenly they're living in a very narrow world in a small circle. They feel trapped, I find that horrible.

"It will be interesting to see if after visiting three countries he feels he can break that circle. Perhaps he'll succeed where intellectuals have failed."

When the program is shown on TV, there will be a live audience of workers to pose questions. Mrs. Hunebelle hopes that this opportunity to address European workers directly will persuade President Nixon to see Laurent.

"I think, too, that it would be good for President Nixon to see a young European worker who has principles and to discuss the nature of happiness with him," Mrs. Hunebelle says. "Perhaps it is childish," she added, "mais c'est beau."

Have you ever wondered who "decides" whether skirts will trail on the sidewalk or fit snugly under the armpit? Whence come the dicta that this season navels will be gilded, earlobes shaven and turbans worn at mid-calf? Who, in short, arbitrarily decrees the abominations that pass as "fashion"? The answer, it would seem, is that nobody "decides"; like pimples and other unsightly blemishes, fashions simply appear and should be dealt with accordingly.

An insight into the process arrives this week by way of UPI from Glen Ellyn, Ill., where shortly before New Year's Eve "fet and lumpy lady" shlumped into a high-fashion boutique. "The more dresses she tried on. the more depressed she became." reads the dispatch. In desperation, owner Toni Nelson opened the back of her display window having forgotten for the moment that her naked mannequing were covered with burlap 'because we just weren't psychologically ready to start spring displays and the winter supply was getting old."

"The lady saw the sacks in the window and I suggested she try one on," said Mrs. Nelson. "Nothing else had looked nice on her, so I sold her a gimny-sack for a dollar. She bought it for New Year's Eve," and thus came an inspiration for an ad which soon appeared in a local paper: "Sack sale for those who just can't find a thing to wear!"

The following Friday, Mrs. Nelson arrived at her boutique to find several women already in line. By poon she had sold 30 one-dollar gunnysacks, ex-hausting her original sourceher own home, where she'd kept a pile of them around for races at her children's hirthday par-ties. Mrs. Nelson quickly tracked down the lumber yard where the sacks were made and lay in a season's supply at a cost of 25 cents apiece.

To further boost the business, Mrs. Nelson devised yet another ad-"the secret of successful gunnysack wearing is that they must be accessorized properly"and now purveys a satisfying quantity of beads, belts, hats, scarves and body stockings to set off the new look. Obviously, there is no grass growing on Mrs. Nelson—for fi there were, you can bet your sweet bippy that by now half the population in yesterday's Télé 7 Jours of W.C. Fields as "the American Maurice Chevalier." The similarity could perhaps best be explained by a favorite conundrum of our college days. Q: Why is Nelson Bockefeller like Santa Claus. A: They both have beards, except Rockefeller. AT-TACKED: In the East German weekly Horizon, Billy Graham, as "Nixon's Rasputin." SUED: Metromedia, Inc., the Manhattan and Bronx Surface Transit and Operating Authority, and Farley Manning Associates, Inc., for $1 million, for an ad in New York City's buses exalting the recipe of "Broadway producer David Merrick's exotic fruit and rice salad." Said Merrick to the New York State Suprems Court: "I don't like rice." DOUBLED: The number of bearded legisla-tors in the 92d Congress, to two, when Rep. Ben B. Blackburn, R., Ga., joined incumbent Sen. Philip A. Hart, D., Mich., behind the brush, SPOILED: The wedding party of a young Polish couple in Lublin, when the groom, Wincenty Kurczuk, chanced to take a look at his marriage certificate. It read: "The Presidium of Lublin's City Council Register Office hereby confirms that citizen Wincenty Kurczak died on the 12th of January."

Hearkening unto the Chinese calendar, the current twelvemonth augurs well for Hobert Humphrey and Ropald Reagan, both of whom will celebrate their 60th birthdays this year. The signs are favorable. Chinere scholars explain, since 1911 was, and 1971 is, "The Year of the Boar." Chinese scholars, it should be noted, are notoriously bad spellers,
